

ICO consultation on the draft right of access guidance

The right of access (known as subject access) is a fundamental right of the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR). It allows individuals to find out what personal data is held about them and to obtain a copy of that data. Following on from our initial GDPR guidance on this right (published in April 2018), the ICO has now drafted more detailed guidance which explains in greater detail the rights that individuals have to access their personal data and the obligations on controllers. The draft guidance also explores the special rules involving certain categories of personal data, how to deal with requests involving the personal data of others, and the exemptions that are most likely to apply in practice when handling a request.

We are running a consultation on the draft guidance to gather the views of stakeholders and the public. These views will inform the published version of the guidance by helping us to understand the areas where organisations are seeking further clarity, in particular taking into account their experiences in dealing with subject access requests since May 2018.

If you would like further information about the consultation, please email SARguidance@ico.org.uk.

Please send us your response by 17:00 on Wednesday 12 February 2020.

Q4 We have found that data protection professionals often struggle with applying and defining 'manifestly unfounded or excessive' subject access requests. We would like to include a wide range of examples from a variety of sectors to help you. Please provide some examples of manifestly unfounded and excessive requests below (if applicable).

As an organization, Gloucestershire County Council has not yet received a request that would fall into the scope of 'manifestly unfounded' so does not have an example to share. We do, however, receive repeat requests but have defined a reasonable interval for these (6 months from the date of the previous request) which does get adhered to by our requesters.

Q5 On a scale of 1-5 how useful is the draft guidance?

1 – Not at all useful	2 – Slightly useful	3 – Moderately useful	4 – Very useful	5 – Extremely useful

Q6 Why have you given this score?

Whilst quite a large document, it does cover all the items that need to be considered for rights of subject access in a clear manner. The information provided is clearly laid out and can be understood by both practitioners and those new to Data Protection alike, which is crucial when handling subject access requests. Whilst there are a lot of links to other documents and information – this keeps the more technical information to one side and easily accessible as required, thus not making the document over complicated by technical and legislative language.

Q7 To what extent do you agree that the draft guidance is clear and easy to understand?

Strongly disagree	Disagree	Neither agree nor disagree	Agree	Strongly agree

Q8 Please provide any further comments or suggestions you may have about the draft guidance.

We welcome further guidance on and examples for 'manifestly unfounded or excessive' subject access requests to help ensure we are complying with good practice should we want to consider its application.
